Program Notes:

Rush was inspired by a radio broadcast of the West Point Saxophone Quartet, which I happened to hear while driving in the car. I was impressed by the new virtuosity of the group and its convincing performances of a number of chromatic, rhythmic, edgy, sorts of pieces. Writing this sort of piece appealed to me as a contrast to my previous quartet, Stepping Out. The idea of the opening (a seamless line of 16th notes beginning softly and growing) came to me early on, but I could not act upon it. It stuck with me though and in August 2002 when I was invited to be a resident at Bellagio, a retreat in Northern Italy, I was able to begin and complete the entire piece during that month. The title Rush is self-explanatory. Its tempo is relentless even during the more lyrical "chorale with protesting soloist" middle section and begins and ends with the same 700 notes!
